Mountain Line Passenger Load Report – October 2021

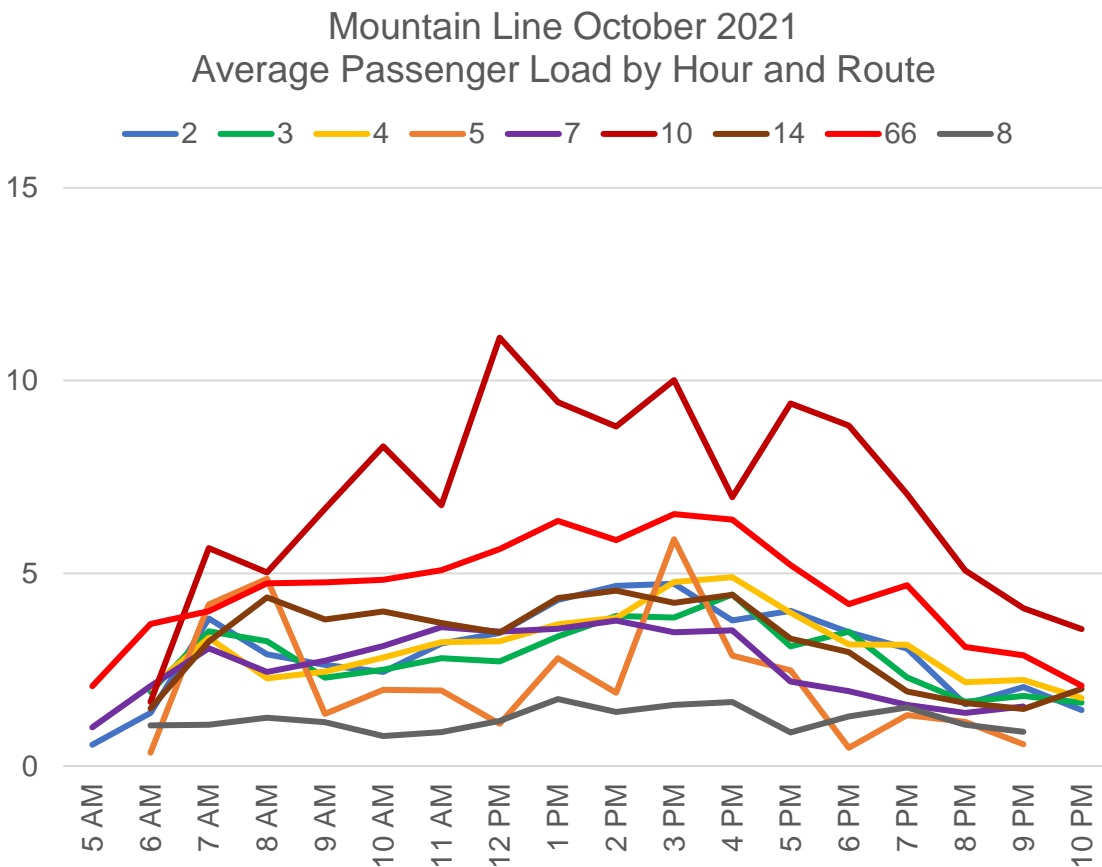

The following information is designed to help transit riders make informed decisions about traveling on our buses. If there is capacity to do so, Mountain Line relies on riders to social distance themselves while on the bus. Mountain Line does not limit the number of people on a bus, so there may be times when social distancing of six feet is not possible.

The following passenger load allows people to have six feet of distance between themselves and others:

- 10 people for a 35-foot bus (typically Routes 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 14, 66, sometimes Route 10)
- 17 people for a 60-foot bus (typically Route 10, sometimes Route 66)

The following ridership data is collected from the entire month.

The graph below describes an average number of people onboard the bus according to route. On average, all routes except Route 10 (maroon line) have 10 or less people on board at any given time. If you want to take Route 3 (green line) but want to choose a time that would allow social distancing, this graph shows that Route 3 typically has less than 5 people on the bus.

Mountain Line October 2021 Maximum Passenger Load by Hour and Route

This graph shows the maximum passenger load experienced over the month of October. All of routes have experienced at least one day in the month when more than 10 people were onboard. If you want to maintain social distance on the bus for Route 5 (Orange Line), data show that you should try to avoid peak travel times of 6-8am and 12-5pm as there is increased activity during those times.
